The room looks best when it is arranged for group sitting.

When 2 trapezoid tables are joined on the long side, 6 people can fit around the table.

Two more groups can be formed around the round tables.

The two larger round tables can be lowered so that chairs can be placed around them or raised to standing tables.

Even 4 people can fit around one trapezoid table.

The trapezoid tables can be made into a long table. Place every other table with the short side facing each other, and every other with the long side facing each other.

14-16 people can sit around the long table.
By placing either the small or the large round table at the end, 15 or 17 people will fit around the table.

With the large round table at the end of the long table, there is room for 17 people around the table.

To get the maximum number of people around a long table, place the short sides of the trapezoid tables towards each other. At the ends, you can place the round tables.

19 people can fit around the table with the placement shown in the picture.
